The substitution of camels as working animals for horses and oxen has been going on rapidly in many parts of Russia recently. In some provinces the draft horse is almost entirely superseded, and the only horses in use are for riding and driving to light vehicles. The camel is a clumsy beast, but for heavy hauling he is admirable. He possesses immense strength, is gentle and tractable, cheap to feed, and fatigue seems to be unknown to him. Indeed he will pull till he drops dead, unless his driver has sense enough to know when to give him a rest.

The man who loves his neighbor as himself, is doing all he can to help God to own the earth.

The heart that departs from God is lost, not merely to that which is good, but to that which is great.—Matthew Henry.

A NONENTITY IN LAW.

Judge Head, of the Alabama Supreme Court, decided an interesting case recently. Sylvester Feslorazzi, a Catholic, died in Mobile some years ago, and bequeathed $2,000 to be expended in masses for his soul by St. Joseph's church. His heirs contested the legality of the bequest. The Chancery Court of Mobile ruled against them, and they appealed to the Supreme Court, which reversed the decision of the lower court, and held that the bequest was void in that there was no living beneficiary of the trust intended to be created; that the soul of a dead person could not be a beneficiary, being a nonentity in the contemplation of the law. The judge is correct. The disembodied soul is not a creature amenable to human law. It cannot sue or be sued before human courts. It has taken its departure to the court of heaven, and is amenable to the Judge of the quick and dead.—Religious Telescope.

"Charity is a kind of asbestos, which, when once kindled in a stove of fire, cannot be extinguished. No wind can blow out its flames, no water can quench its heat, no storm can put out its fire."

Be honest with yourself, whatever the temptation; say nothing to others that you do not think, and play no tricks with your own mind. Of all the evil spirits abroad at this hour in the world, insincerity is the most dangerous.—J. A. Froude

IMPORTANT FOR DYSPEPTICS.—"A doctor declares that he can cure any case of dyspepsia if the patient will follow one simple rule; that is, only to eat one thing at a meal. He adds that that this was the principle which a celebrated physician worked upon who was consulted by Bismarck awhile ago, and that it, as usual, resulted in perfect restoration of the great man's health. He further says that it is the mixing of food that requires different lengths of time for digestion, that it is too hard work for the stomach, and that we would all live much more comfortably and healthfully if our meals were simplified to a single dish at each. This is a hard dictum to which to bow, but doubtless we could do more in its line than we do."

As a sprig of hyssop sweetened the bitter water of Marah, so a gentle word can turn a sour heart into a fountain of refreshing love,
